Jump Start student Kara Hubbard of Carlisle worked with intern Phillip McGehei of Star City in the DSB Technology Lab. The Department of Human Services Division of Services for the Blind sponsors the Jump Start career development program for high school students who are blind or visually impaired. DSB places students in part-time jobs in the mornings and offers educational and recreational activities in the afternoons and evenings. McGehei will intern at DSB until returning to the University of Arkansas at Little Rock in the fall.

Carlisle teen who's visually impaired completes unique program

Kara Hubbard of Carlisle was among the teens graduating from Jump Start, a career development program for high school students who are blind or severely visually impaired. The program, based in Little Rock, ran from June 5 – June 24.

Students are selected from applications taken in the early spring of each year and come from across the state to attend the unique program sponsored by the Department of Human Services Division of Services for the Blind (DSB) and the Arkansas School for the Blind and Visually Impaired (ASBVI).

DSB places students in part-time jobs in the mornings and offers educational and recreational activities in the afternoons and evenings. This is the only program of its kind in Arkansas and is designed to assist students in transitioning from high school to employment or post-secondary education and increase their confidence in social situations.

To the degree possible, students are placed in jobs in their fields of interest so they can gain insight into their chosen professions. Students who don't have specific career goals at this point in their lives are given other employment according to their experience, skills and abilities.

Hubbard was placed in the DSB Technology Lab. "She was assigned a number of tasks, all of which she performed exceptionally well. Kara went above and beyond, and did an amazing job. Her contributions made a difference, and she will be missed," said her supervisor Elizabeth Whitaker, State Rehabilitation Technologist. Hubbard installed software and hardware; did troubleshooting for computer issues; and organized items in the technology lab.

It was Hubbard's first Jump Start experience, her first job, and her first paycheck. "It was fun. I learned a lot. It's been a great experience. We've had some good speakers." Her favorite activities apart from work were the class on stress management, the cooking lesson, and learning how to do job searches online.

The Jump Start students heard job information presentations from Goodwill Industries, Arkansas Lighthouse for the Blind, Easter Seals, and Medlinc, a medical training and staffing company. They toured the West Rock Coffee factory and World Services for the Blind, which offers several career training programs. Representatives from the University of Arkansas at Morrilton presented information about choosing a college, financial resources, and balancing campus life and studies. The students visited Central Baptist College in Conway.

Students toured the Arkansas Career Training Institute (ACTI), formerly known as the Hot Springs Rehabilitation Center. While in Hot Springs, they explored Garvan Woodland Gardens and rode on the Belle of Hot Springs Riverboat.

Jump Start students learned independent living skills that many people without visual impairments take for granted. They learned money management, banking, stress management techniques, self-advocacy, and meal planning. They participated in a cooking lesson with Chef Brian Kelly of Little Rock. Students received orientation and mobility training on how to travel using a white cane.

The students volunteered at Our House, an organization that provides shelter, training, and child care for people who are homeless or near homeless, and Arkansas Rice Depot, a statewide hunger and disaster relief organization.

Working part-time and interacting with other students who are blind or visually impaired increased the students' confidence, social skills and self-esteem. Some students who came from small communities had never met other teenagers who are blind or visually impaired. Social skills and interactions with others are a crucial part of life, so recreational activities were built into the program. Students went bowling, saw a movie, painted their own works of art, and saw a play at Murry's Dinner Playhouse.

After a class on business and dining etiquette, students practiced the skills they learned at Sonny Williams' Steak Room and Benihana Hibachi Grill.

Jump Start participants stayed on the ASBVI campus during the week and returned home on the weekends. At the end of the three-week program, there was a talent show and a graduation event held at the Ron Robinson Theater, part of the Central Arkansas Library System.

Hubbard graduated from ASBVI in May and was the valedictorian. In high school she was the senior class vice president and participated in the student council, track, Future Business Leaders of America, cheerleading, choir, band, and the Family, Career and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA) club. Her hobbies are writing, watching TV, reading, and visiting with family and friends. She has registered for the fall semester at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock and plans to major in English with an emphasis in creative writing.

DSB provides vocational rehabilitation services to adults who are blind or severely visually impaired and whose goal is successful employment. The division also serves youth and older blind individuals.
