Older Arkansans Can Improve Health with Grocery Program

DHS staff will be at the Elkins Senior Activity and Wellness Center on May 14 to speak about SNAP

The Arkansas Department of Human Services (DHS) is partnering with senior centers across Arkansas to educate older Arkansans about SNAP, a program that helps recipients afford healthy foods.

Right now, about one-third of Arkansas seniors are living with food insecurity or are at risk of hunger. Several factors, including lack of transportation and financial hardship, contribute to Arkansas having among the highest senior food insecurity rates in the country.

“In Arkansas, many eligible seniors are not receiving SNAP benefits. Partnering with senior centers is a great way to talk to older adults about this nutrition support program,” said Joni Jones, director of the DHS Division of County Operations. Jones said this senior outreach will allow DHS to reach more people in rural areas who may not be aware they are eligible for benefits.

Krista Hughes, director of the DHS Division of Aging and Adult Services said “SNAP allows seniors to go to the grocery store and purchase foods that doctors recommend for a healthy diet. Research has shown that medications are more effective when older adults eat a healthy and adequate diet.”

On May 14th, DHS staff will be at the Elkins Senior Activity and Wellness Center located 201 West First St. beginning at 11:15 a.m. to speak to seniors about SNAP, answer questions, and provide one-on-one application assistance. For more information on this local outreach event, call Sara Green at (479) 643-2741.

In 2011, more than 24,000 Arkansans age 65 or above received SNAP but many more are eligible for the nutrition program.

Tobian explains that Arkansas has special policy rules for people age 60 or older or anyone receiving disability payments. At each senior center, DHS eligibility specialists and volunteers will explain SNAP, check eligibility, and complete applications.

Arkansans of any age may apply for SNAP through the online application portal Access Arkansas (www.access.arkansas.gov). The site can also be used to apply for help paying for Medicare premiums and ARKids First.
